NEW YORK

Antonio Gual for TULLE NEW YORK, is known for a combination of glamorous styling and exquisite nuances that make the collection so exceptional. Formerly a designer for Melissa Sweet, TULLE silhouettes are body-conscious, feminine, and ethereal while showcasing a contemporary bride with a desire to give and receive affection.

It is always such a pleasure for us to sit down with the amazing team and especially Tulle designer Antonio Gual. I had the honor of sitting down with Antonio for bridal fashion week in October to view the new collection and talk about what inspires him as well as what is coming up for TULLE NEW YORK. I had so much fun learning about his new couture collection, but most of all, I loved learning about the designer himself. Check out the interview below to get a glimpse into the life of designer Antonio Gual.

How did you end up in your profession?

Entirely Melissa Sweet, we knew each other from long ago socially. When her company was bought and moved to New York, she contacted me to help on her line. The rest as they say is history.

Who, what and where inspires you?

Intelligent, stylish and witty people such as Lauren Santo Domingo. Music I find inspirational. Italy inspires me.

What is the best part of your job?

The idea of creating beauty. Very few jobs require making something beautiful, that is my job.

What do you love about brides?

The brides desire to be beautiful, I find that touching and endearing.

What is your favorite trend, look or dress right now? (Pick one!)

Gowns that are not strapless will be next.

Were there certain things that inspired you when you envisioned this collection?

Butterflies, the flutter, the grace and the ephemeral existence, plus the fragility all made me incorporate much of that into this collection.

What was different about this collection and seasons past?

The emphasis for this collection was on movement, many of the gowns have tiered skirts that flutter. This collection is more romantic.

What is your favorite dress trends right now?

My favorite trend would have to be, exposed backs. My Judy, Diane and Alicia share that. I like a more natural elegance, big fan of twinkle, not mad about bling.

What is the one thing every bride needs?

A beautiful lush bouquet

Tell us a style secret that can make weddings look amazing?

I think less is more as far as "styling" a wedding.

Is there a piece of advice you give to brides when looking for a wedding dress?

When shopping for a gown, let go of all preconceived ideas, let go and allow a discovery phase to take place.

In terms of beauty looks, do you have dos and don'ts?

Always be grateful, and acknowledge all around you. Do not wear a lot of make up

What's next?
